Write three sentences using clauses in apposition with it. 12. Write three sentences containing substantive clauses introduced by who, whose and whom. 13. Write three sentences containing substantive clauses introduced by different conjunctive-adverbs. 14. Write three sentences containing substantive clauses introduced by different compound relative pronouns. 15. Write five complex sentences in which the clauses are substantives in different relations. In compelling children to memorize rules and forms whose application they do not understand, you make them slaves to mere form. The ability to quote grammar from the title page to the end, would in no way improve the speech of the unthinking. Form can attract only when it conveys thought, hence formal grammar never...
