Excerpt: . . . decision which may be summed up thus: That the Indians were free men; that they ought to be instructed in the Christian faith; that they might be ordered to work, but so that their working should not hinder their conversion, and should be such as they could endure; that they should have cottages and lands of their own, and time to work for themselves; that they should be made to hold communication with the Christians, and that they should receive wages, not paid in money, but in clothes and in furniture for their cottages. These propositions, being put in due form, were given to the king as the answer of the Junta. It was signed by Bishop Fonscca, who had from the first been the person principally charged with the management of Indian affairs; by Doctor Palacios Rubies, a learned jurist and writer of those...
