CHAPTER II NAPLES, JULY-AUGUST 1860 [Mr. Elliot's journal opens with an entry dated July 6, 1860. Events had been shaping themselves quickly. The war declared by Sardinia and France against Austria was terminated by the victories of Magenta and Solferino, but the Preliminary Treaty concluded by the Emperor acting independently and signed at- Villa Franca in July 1859 left Austria in possession of Venetia. Italian patriots were indignant, and when the Sardinians learnt not only that Venetia was sacrificed but that the Emperor's support had been bought at the price of the cession of Nice and Savoy to France their feelings may be better imagined than described. In March 1860 the States of Central Italy had voted their union to the Kingdom of Victor Emmanuel, and almost simultaneously the revolution in Southern Italy had broken out, and Garibaldi sailed from Genoa with...
